Admiral B.R. Inman
Deputy Director,
Central Intelligence
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Admiral Inman:

Foreign events these last two years, highlighted by those that took place in Afghanistan and Poland, and renewed concerns over national security, have brought into focus again national policies regarding the export of technology and technological goods. At the same time, exports of high technology products continue to make a major, badly needed, positive contribution to the U.S. trade balance.

Being America's leading exporter of manufactured goods as well as a major supplier to national defense, the U.S. aerospace industry is keenly aware of the ever-present dilemma between national security considerations and trade. In a situation where government policies have to be evolutionary, it is vital to a healthy relationship between the private sector that they be communicated to and understood by industry, and equally important that industry's views and concerns be properly stated to the government.

To provide a forum for that exchange, the Aerospace Industries Association will hold a symposium on technology transfer on Friday, April 30, at the International Club, 1800 K Street, N.W., Washington, beginning at 9:30 A.M. in the Wadsworth Room.

The morning session will be a panel on policies and criteria, to which we are fortunate to have received acceptances from Dr. H. Guyford Stever, National Research Council; Dr. Richard D. DeLauer, the Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering; Mr. Lawrence J. Brady, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Trade Administration; Mr. Laurence J. Adams, President of Martin Marietta Aerospace and Chairman of the Multi-Association Policy Advisory Group; and Mr. J. Frederick Bucy, the President of Texas Instruments, Incorporated. Senator John H. Glenn will be the luncheon speaker. We would be very pleased if you could join us on this morning panel on policies and criteria. I enclose a copy of the proposed agenda for the April 30 meeting.

The afternoon will be devoted to a workshop on micro-electronics.

I think you ought to try to do this, but I sense that your calendar precludes it; ?

Even if you pass this one up, there are others — such as the IEEE Spectrum soiree in early June, where you tentatively agreed to attend.
